About us:

Based in Orange NSW, Bullseye Ag is a young, but rapidly expanding company, founded and run by the winner of the 2023 Zanda McDonald award, Mitch Highett. The young and driven Bullseye Ag team of 8 has a diverse range of practical and organisational skills including accounting, project management and farm management. As a team we are involved in the management of family and corporate farms, farm lease management and the management and delivery of high value projects.

About the role:

Bullseye Ag farm managers are hardworking individuals who constantly strive for good outcomes for their clients as well as their own self progression and education. They take an empathetic approach to client needs and use their own initiative, experience, and organisational skills to achieve both short-term and long-term objectives.

The properties we currently manage are livestock based (sheep and cattle), with some forage cropping and hay making enterprises attached. Despite our focus on livestock, an opportunity may exist for an enthusiastic manager whose experience to date has been cropping-focused.

Farm managers manage their time between the Bullseye Ag office and the farms they manage, developing farm plans, resourcing and generally thinking ahead so all decisions are made rationally. Farm managers pay special attention to animal health, soil health and cost of production to ensure there is operational and financial sustainability of the farm. The farms we currently manage have varying objectives however all are great landowners with above average facilities.

About you:

- You are passionate about farming and have a desire to be a positive figure in the agricultural industry.
- You are farm management material, with several years hands-on experience and an open mind to manage a variety of properties, each with unique operational objectives.
- You possess strong communication skills (both verbal and written).
- You have strong people skills, prioritising the relationship between yourself and our highly valued clients.
- You will be a positive addition to the Bullseye Ag culture – we pride ourselves on making sure we come to work to have fun as well as have a career.
- You have attention to detail and ensure that our clients' assets are looked after.
